UNCTAD Technical Cooperation Project on “Assistance to Countries of the Asian Region on MFN
and Preferential Tariffs Negotiations and GSP Utilization”

Executive summary

Intergovernmental negotiations held under the auspices of UNCTAD resulted in the adoption in 1971 of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) whereby preferential tariff treatment is granted on a non-reciprocal and non-discriminatory basis by most developed countries to exports from developing countries, with most-favoured-nation (MFN) duties reduced or eliminated.

This handbook is part of a series of publications aimed at assisting exporters, producers and government officials to utilize trading opportunities available under various GSP schemes.

It gives practical guidance on how to utilize the preferences under the GSP scheme of Japan.

In addition to explanations on beneficiaries, product coverage, depth of tariff cuts, special measures for LDCs, graduation measures and rules of origin, etc., it provides on product by product detailed information of: GSP rates, amount of ceilings, and specific conditions for origin country acknowledgement.

This handbook is published under the auspices of the UNCTAD Technical Cooperation Project on Assistance to Countries of the Asian Region on MFN and Preferential Tariffs Negotiations and GSP Utilization (RAS/97/A18). Its publication has been made possible thanks to a contribution from the Government of Japan.

CHECKLIST: HOW TO BENEFIT FROM JAPAN'S GSP

Step 1: Establish the tariff classification of the product

- Establish the correct tariff classification (tariff item number, HS based) of your product intended for export to Japan.

Step 2: Check the product coverage

- Check whether your product is eligible for preference under Japan's GSP scheme.
- In order to do this, the product lists of the GSP scheme must be examined in relation to the precise tariff classification and product description of your product.

(See "Product coverage", page 3, "Positive list of agricultural products", page 25, and "Negative list of industrial products", page 49 )

Step 3: Assess the preferential margin

- If your product is eligible for preferential treatment under Japan's GSP scheme, the preferential margin should be assessed to determine the price you can offer your buyer/importer.

(See "Depth of tariff cuts", page 4, "Positive list of agricultural products", page 25, and "List of selected products", page 65)

Step 4: Check ceiling lists

- Check ceilings, which are set annually, and understand administration of ceilings.
- The latest monthly digest <sup>2</sup> of ceiling must be checked.

Step 5: Comply with origin criteria

- Ensure that your product complies with the origin criteria set out by Japan. Each GSP scheme lays down its own origin criteria.

Step 6: Check consignment conditions

- Ensure that the consignment conditions specified are met.

(See “Rules of origin”: Rules for transportation, page 10 )

Step 7: Prepare documentary evidence

- The GSP scheme requires the Certificate of Origin (combined declaration and certificate) Form A as documentary evidence. If necessary, additional certificates are also required.

I. EXPLANATORY NOTES FOR JAPAN'S GSP SCHEME

The Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) aims at contributing to the economic development of developing countries. The GSP provides benefits to developing countries by enabling qualified products to enter the markets of preference-giving countries (developed countries) at reduced rates of duty or free.

A. Beneficiaries

Japan grants preferential treatment to 155 developing countries and 25 territories (see list on next page). Beneficiaries are designated by Cabinet Order among countries/territories requesting preferential treatment, subject to the following criteria:

- (a) The economy of the country or territory must be in a stage of development;
- (b) The country must be a member of UNCTAD;
- (c) The territory must have its own tariff and trade system;
- (d) The country or territory wishes to receive special benefits in respect of customs duty;
- (e) The country or territory must be prescribed by a Cabinet Order as a country or territory to which such benefit may appropriately be extended.

Countries classified as least developed countries (LDCs) are eligible for special LDC measures.

B. Product coverage

1. Agricultural products (HS chapters 1-25)

Japan grants preferences for selected agricultural and fishery products under 74 HS headings. The full list is set out from page 25 onwards.

2. Industrial products (HS chapters 25-97)

Preferences are granted for all industrial products, including forestry and mining products, with the exception of products under 27 HS headings. The list of products not covered by the scheme is set out from page 49 onwards.

|                              | Product coverage                        |   | Tariff cuts           | Safeguard     |
|------------------------------|---|---|-----------------------|---------------|
| Agricultural products | 74 HS headings                          |   | 0 - 100 % cut         | Escape clause |
| Industrial products   | All products, except for 27 HS headings | Non-ceiling items:Other industrial products           | 100 % cut (duty free) | Escape clause |

C. Depth of tariff cuts

1. Agricultural products (HS Chapters 1-24)

Various tariff reductions, including duty-free treatment, apply to the products covered by the scheme. The list from page 25 onwards (Positive list of agricultural products) shows GSP tariff rates covered by the scheme.

2. Industrial products (HS Chapters 25-97)

Industrial products covered by the scheme are in principle given duty-free treatment, with the exception of “Selected products - 66 HS headings” (see page 65) for which tariffs are reduced by 50 per cent from MFN rates.

D. Ceilings

1. Ceilings

- (a) There are no ceilings for agricultural products (HS chapters 1-24).
- (b) Industrial products (HS chapters 25-97) in about 440(4-digit) HS headings are subject to ceilings, and these products can be imported under preferential treatment until the ceilings are reached. For all other industrial products, there are no ceilings. The ceilings are set for 125 product groups, each covering products of a HS Chapter, heading or subheading, and the ceilings are calculated for each fiscal year. Information about the current fiscal year (April 1999 to March 2000) is given from page 71.

2. Calculation formula

- (a) To calculate the ceilings for items imports of which are considered to have relatively less impact on the domestic industries:
 Add 10% of total imports from non-beneficiary countries of two years ago to total imports from beneficiary countries except LDCs in 1989.

- (b) For sensitive products to which the calculation formula above is not applicable, ceilings are calculated in the following manner (depending on the situation of the affected domestic industry):
  - (i) Ceiling of the previous fiscal year, multiplied by 1.06; or
  - (ii) Ceiling of the previous fiscal year, multiplied by 1.03; or
  - (iii) Ceiling of the previous fiscal year.
- (c) Ceilings will not be lower than those of the previous fiscal year.

3. Utilization of ceilings

The ceilings for each product group apply to all preference-receiving countries on an equal footing. No allocation or reservation is made for any individual beneficiary country.

The MFN rate of duty will apply after the ceilings are exceeded. Preferential treatment will also be suspended for a particular product group with reference to a particular preference-receiving country if preferential imports of products originating in that country exceed a maximum country amount of one-fourth of the total value/quantity of the ceiling (see "Ceilings for fiscal year 1999", page 71).

4. Flexible administration of ceilings and maximum country amounts

For products posing no threat or injury to Japan's domestic industry, imports will be allowed to continue under preferential treatment, even after the imports exceeded the ceiling or the maximum country amount, until such threat or injury is eventually caused. This procedure applies to ceilings in 35 product groups and maximum country amounts in 65 product groups; it may lead to ceilings and maximum country amounts being exceeded considerably (see "Ceilings for fiscal year 1999", page 71).

5. Administration of ceilings and maximum country amounts

Ceilings and maximum country amounts are administered on a first-come-first-served basis subject to daily or monthly control, or by prior allotment (see “Ceilings for fiscal year 1999”, page 71).

(a) Daily control

In the case of 37 product groups, imports are computed daily and the MFN rate is imposed two days after the ceiling or maximum country amount has been exceeded.

Example: product group A (ceiling-1,000; maximum country amount-250)

(b) Monthly control

In the case of 65 product groups, imports are computed monthly and the MFN rate is applied on the first day of the second month after the month in which the imports have exceeded the ceiling or the maximum country amount.

Example: product group B (ceiling-800; maximum country amount-200)

(c) Prior allotment

In the case of 23 product groups, the preferential ceiling is allotted to importers of these products each fiscal year.

E. Safeguard mechanism

As in the case of other GSP schemes, Japan has reserved the right under certain circumstances to suspend preferential treatment for products included in the scheme.

F. Graduation of advanced beneficiaries

A particular product of a particular beneficiary may be excluded by Cabinet Order from preferential treatment under GSP if:

- (a) The beneficiary is classified as a high-income economy in the World Bank Atlas, or, when it is not in the Atlas, it is recognized to have the level of GNP per capita;
- (b) Exports of the product of the beneficiary to Japan exceed 25 per cent of the world's exports of the product to Japan; and
- (c) Exports of the product of the beneficiary to Japan are valued at more than one billion yen.

Starting from April 2000, a beneficiary may be excluded from the list of beneficiaries if it is classified as a high-income economy in the previous three consecutive years' World Bank Atlas.

A list of products excluded from preferential treatment is given on page 143.

G. Special treatment for the least developed countries

The following special treatment is offered to the least developed countries for all products covered by the scheme:

- (a) Duty-free entry;
- (b) Exemption of preferential imports from ceiling restrictions.

|                              | Product coverage                           | Tariff cuts    | Safeguard            |
|------------------------------|---|-----------------------|-----------------------------|
| Agricultural products | 74 HS headings                                    | 100 % cut (duty free) | Escape clause               |
| Industrial products   | All industrial products, excluding 27 HS headings | 100 % cut (duty free) | Escape clauseNo ceiling |

H. Information on preferential imports

The value (or quantity) of preferential imports of each product group is announced monthly in the Official Gazette of Japan.

II. RULES OF ORIGIN UNDER JAPAN'S GSP SCHEME

In order for goods exported from a preference-receiving country to be eligible for preferential tariff treatment, they must be recognized as originating in that country under the origin criteria of the Japanese GSP scheme and transported to Japan in accordance with its rules for transportation.

A. Rules for transportation (direct consignment)

This rule is designed to ensure that the goods retain their identity and are not manipulated or further processed in the course of shipment.

- (i) In principle, the goods must be transported directly to Japan, without passing through any territory other than the exporting preference-receiving country.
- (ii) However, with regard to goods transported to Japan through territories other than the exporting preference-receiving country, they are entitled to preferential treatment, if:
  - (a) They have not undergone any operations in the transit countries other than transshipment or temporary storage exclusively on account of transport requirements, and;
  - (b) The transshipment or temporary storage has been carried out in a bonded area or any other similar place, under the supervision of the customs authorities of those transit countries.
- (iii) With regard to goods which have been exported from a preference-receiving country for temporary storage or display at exhibitions, fairs and similar events in another country and which have then been exported from that other country to Japan by the person who first exported the goods, they are entitled to preferential treatment if:
  - (a) The transportation to Japan from the country where the exhibition, etc., has been held falls under (i) or (ii) above; and
  - (b) The exhibition has been held in a bonded area or any other similar place, under the supervision of that country.

B. Origin criteria

Goods are considered as originating in a preference-receiving country if they are wholly obtained in that country.

In the case of goods produced totally or partly from materials or parts which are imported from other countries or are of unknown origin, such resulting goods are considered as originating in a preference-receiving country if those materials or parts used have undergone sufficient working or processing in that country.

As a general rule, working or processing operations will be considered sufficient when the resulting good is classified in an HS tariff heading (4 digits) other than that covering each of the non-originating materials or parts used in production. However, there are two exceptions to this rule. One is that working or processing will not be considered sufficient when that working or processing is very simple, even if there is a change in HS heading. The other is that some goods can obtain originating status without a change in HS heading if they satisfy specific conditions.

The following minimal processes are not accepted as bestowing originating status:

1. Operations to ensure the preservation of products during transport and storage (drying, freezing, placing in salt water and other similar operations);
2. Simple cutting or screening;
3. Simple placing in bottles, boxes and other similar packing cases;
4. Repacking, sorting or classifying;
5. Marking or affixing of marks, labels or other distinguishing signs on products or their packaging;
6. Simple mixing of non-originating products;
7. Simple assembly of parts of non-originating products;
8. Simple making-up of sets of articles of non-originating products;
9. A combination of two or more operations specified in 1-8.

C. Use of materials imported from Japan

In application of the origin criteria, the following special treatment will be given to materials imported from Japan into a preference-receiving country and used there in the production of goods to be exported to Japan later (preference-giving country content rule):

1. In the case of goods produced in a preference-receiving country solely from materials imported from Japan, or goods produced in a preference-receiving country solely from materials wholly obtained in that country and materials imported from Japan, such goods will be regarded as being wholly obtained in that country.
2. Any goods exported from Japan which have been used as part of raw materials or components for the production of any goods produced other than those goods as provided for in paragraph 1. above shall be regarded as wholly obtained in that country.

However, with regard to products obtained in a preference-receiving country listed from page 137 onwards, special treatment will not be granted.

D. Rules of cumulative origin

In the case of goods produced in two or more members of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) and exported to Japan from one of those members, ASEAN is regarded as one preference-receiving country for the purpose of the above-mentioned origin criteria and preference-giving country content rule.

The ASEAN countries enjoy the following treatment when origin criteria are applied:

- (a) Goods wholly obtained in ASEAN or goods imported from Japan to ASEAN are treated as originating in ASEAN.
- (b) Goods produced totally or partly from materials imported to ASEAN or materials of unknown origin are treated as originating in ASEAN if those materials used have undergone sufficient working or processing in countries involved in the production.

The origin of goods which are eligible for preferential tariff treatment according to the rules of cumulative origin is the country that produces and exports the goods to Japan. To make use of the cumulative origin rule, a Cumulative Working/Processing Certificate (see page 153) should be presented to the Customs at the time of import declaration, in addition to the Certificate of Origin Form A.

E. Documentary evidence

1. *Evidence relating to origin of goods

(a) *Documentary requirements for all goods to receive GSP treatment

In order for goods to receive-preferential tariff treatment, a Certificate of Origin (combined declaration and certificate) Form A (see page 149) must be submitted to the Japanese customs authorities on importation of the goods to Japan. The Certificate is to be issued by the customs authorities (or other competent government authorities of the exporting preference-receiving country or other bodies of that country, such as chambers of commerce, which are registered as issuers by the Japanese customs authorities) upon application from the exporter when the goods concerned. However, with regard to consignments with a customs value not exceeding 200,000 yen or goods whose origins are evident (see list on page 14 ), this Certificate will not be required.

(b) *Material imported from Japan

When one or other of the types of special treatment under the preference-giving country content rule is sought in respect of goods to be exported from a preference-receiving country to

Japan, the following evidence to establish that the materials used in the production of the goods were originally imported from Japan into that country will be required:

- Certificate of Materials Imported from Japan (see page 151 ) issued by the same competent authorities issuing the Certificate of Origin Form A.

(c) Cumulative origin

When one or other of the types of special treatment under the rules of cumulative origin is sought in respect of goods produced in an ASEAN member country, a Cumulative Working/Processing Certificate (see page 153 ) must be submitted on importation of the goods into Japan to the Japanese customs authorities, together with a Certificate of Origin Form A. The term “C-ASEAN” and the reference number of the Cumulative Working/Processing Certificate must be entered in box 4 (“for official use”) of the Certificate of Origin.

2. Evidence relating to transport

In the case of transportation coming under (ii) or (iii) of the rules for transportation mentioned above, the following evidence to establish that the transportation was in conformity with the conditions specified thereunder must be produced:

- (a) Through bill of lading;
- (b) Certification by the customs authorities or other government authorities of the transit countries; or
- (c) Failing these, any other substantiating document deemed sufficient.

However, with regard to consignments with a customs value not exceeding 200,000 yen, this evidence will not be required.
