Item 2: High-level segment: Economic growth and poverty reduction in the 1990s – Lessons from a decade of economic reform for development strategies and global partnerships in the new millennium

10. According to the World Bank's Economic Growth in the 1990s: Learning from a Decade of Reform, economic reform in the 1990s had very mixed results and in most countries did not lead to sustained growth at rates sufficient to reduce poverty significantly. The high-level segment will:

- (a) Review the growth and poverty reduction record of the 1990s, including the development strategies of the most successful countries and the consequences of the key pillars of the economic reforms – macroeconomic stability, trade liberalization, financial liberalization, and privatization and deregulation (with reference to the World Bank report and country case studies, e.g. on Chile, Tunisia and Viet Nam);
- (b) Consider the latest thinking on development strategies for accelerated growth and poverty reduction (e.g. on growth diagnostics and identifying the binding constraint), based on the assessment of experience;
- (c) Consider the implications for effective global partnerships in the areas of trade, finance, investment and technology.

Growth and development in the 1990s: Lessons from an enigmatic decade

Item 3: Interdependence and global economic issues from a trade and development perspective: New features of global interdependence

11. The Board has, as a background document for its deliberations, the Trade and Development Report 2005 and its Overview. The Report reviews recent trends in the world economy from the point of view of progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and the factors that have contributed to faster and more broad-based growth in developing countries. It also examines the risk factors in the world economy, especially for developing countries, that could arise from the recent surge in oil prices and from the increasing global imbalances. The Report also provides an in-depth assessment of recent and future determinants of the trade patterns of China and India, in particular their growing share in world imports of different primary commodities and in world exports of low-skilled manufactures. It analyses the implications of fast growth in the large East and South Asian economies for primary commodity prices, puts the recent evolution of the terms of trade of developing countries into a longer-term context, and examines the real income effects of recent movements in the terms of trade of different groups of developing countries. Finally, the Report identifies new features in global interdependence that may require adjustments in national development strategies as well as policy adjustments at the international level. The debate on the item will be enriched by an interactive discussion with a panel of experts.

Item 4: Review of progress in the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001–2010

12. Pursuant to paragraph 113 of the Programme of Action for the LDCs for the Decade 2001–2010, UNCTAD has continued its efforts to undertake concrete steps to mainstream actions and commitments contained in the Programme of Action into its activities and into the work of the intergovernmental machinery. Its activities will focus on research and policy analysis, consensus building, technical cooperation and capacity building.

(a) UNCTAD-wide activities in favour of LDCs: Fourth progress report

13. At its regular sessions, the Trade and Development Board reviews progress in implementation of the Programme of Action for the LDCs for the Decade 2001–2010 (PoA) in areas within the mandates and competence of UNCTAD. In its agreed conclusions 476(L) of 17 October 2003, the Board urged the secretariat to continue to report to the Board at its regular sessions on UNCTAD's activities in favour of LDCs, including on activities related to the Integrated Framework for Trade-Related Technical Assistance to Least Developed Countries (IF), and emphasized the need for UNCTAD to continue to contribute to the mandated reviews by ECOSOC and the General Assembly of the implementation of the PoA. The present report (TD/B/52/3), which is prepared in response to this decision, aims at assisting the Board at its fifty-second session in its annual review of UNCTAD's contribution to the implementation of the PoA. The report emphasizes, among other things, the importance of constant dialogue between LDCs and their development partners to seek ways and means of enhancing the substantive impact of analytical and operational activities of UNCTAD on the trade and development prospects of these countries.

(b) Erosion of preferences for the least developed countries: Assessment of effects and mitigating options

14. The Trade and Development Board, at its fiftieth session in 2003, examined the impact of recent initiatives in favour of LDCs in the area of market access. A background note by the secretariat (TD/B/50/5) pointed out that market access preferences had a beneficial impact on investment, job creation and poverty reduction through trade in several LDCs. However, erosion of market access preferences for LDCs arising from MFN tariff reduction and regional free trade arrangements was underlined as one of the most serious challenges to LDCs in their efforts to overcome their competitive disadvantages in the global economy. With this in mind, the Board asked the secretariat

"to perform analyses concerning the consequences to LDCs of the possible erosion of preferences resulting from further trade liberalization and, as appropriate, recommend measures to assist the LDCs to mitigate the adverse consequences" of this phenomenon.

15. Background note TD/B/52/4 has been prepared in response to the above request, as an interim step to examine the implications of preference erosion. It highlights the countries and products that are benefiting most from the recent preferential market access initiatives of the European Union, Japan and the United States in favour of LDCs, while pointing out that nearly 20 primary commodities of great importance to LDCs are exported to the relevant three major markets without enjoying preferential treatment, as these products are MFN duty-free or subject to a very low MFN tariff. The note briefly examines possible measures to mitigate the adverse effects of preference erosion. Besides calls for deepening existing preferences and seeking financial compensation for countries most severely affected by the erosion phenomenon, there is growing recognition of the importance of extending the notion of preferential treatment to policy areas other than market access preference. A panel of experts will discuss these issues during the fifty-second session of the Board.

Item 5: Economic development in Africa: The role of foreign direct investment in growth and development

16. The Board will have before it an overview of a report on foreign direct investment in Africa to be read in conjunction with the full study, contained in document UNCTAD/GDS/AFRICA/2005/1, which will be available in English and French. In recent years, attracting FDI has assumed a prominent place in economic development strategies as a key to financing development in African countries without increasing their indebtedness. In addition, expectations have risen that by creating jobs, transferring new technologies, and building linkages with the rest of the economy, FDI will directly address the continent's poverty challenge. Thus policy reforms aimed at improving the investment climate in African countries have increasingly been centred on attracting FDI. These reforms have not, in most circumstances, had the desired results either in increasing FDI flows in productive sectors or in ensuring more rapid growth and poverty reduction. The report proceeds from the need to take a more critical approach to evaluating the size, quality and impact of FDI in African countries.

Item 6: Review of developments and issues in the post-Doha work programme of particular concern to developing countries

17. The Board has, since 2002, undertaken a regular review of developments and issues in the post-Doha work programme of particular concern to developing countries. The ongoing multilateral trade negotiations under the Doha work programme represent major opportunities and challenges for assuring development gains for developing countries from the international trading system and trade negotiations. This item gives the Board an opportunity to discuss progress attained in the work programme in areas of interest to developing countries since the Decision adopted by the WTO General Council on 1 August 2004, including the "July approximation". This is particularly timely in view of the comprehensive review in September by the General Assembly of the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Development Goals, as well as the forthcoming Sixth WTO Ministerial Conference in Hong Kong (China) on 13–18 December 2005. The secretariat will circulate a note to assist the Board in carrying out this mandate.

Item 7: UNCTAD's contribution to the implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields:

- UNCTAD's contribution, within its mandate, to the implementation of, and to the review of progress made in the implementation of, the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, under its relevant agenda items

18. In its resolution 57/270 B, the General Assembly stressed the need to make maximum use of existing United Nations mechanisms for the purpose of reviewing the implementation of commitments made within the United Nations system in key areas of development. In this regard, it invited the Trade and Development Board to contribute, within its mandate, to the implementation of, and to the review of progress made in the implementation of, the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, under its relevant agenda items.

19. Paragraph 2 of the São Paulo Consensus states that UNCTAD is expected to make substantial contributions to the implementation of the outcomes of recent global conferences. Paragraph 10 of the same document states that UNCTAD has a special responsibility to contribute to the achievement of the international development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration.

20. The Board is expected to respond to the two requests addressed to it by the General Assembly in paragraph 27(a) of resolution 57/270 B on the basis of a note to be prepared by the UNCTAD secretariat.

Item 8: Technical cooperation activities

(a) Review of the technical cooperation activities of UNCTAD (Report of the Working Party on its forty-fifth session)

21. The Board will review the technical cooperation activities undertaken in 2004, as well as developments in UNCTAD's technical cooperation, in particular issues related to trade- and investment-related capacity building and progress in the implementation of decision 478L of the Board at its fiftieth session regarding technical cooperation. In considering this item, the Board will be assisted by the outcome of the forty-fifth session of the Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget, held from 12 to 16 September 2005, including a programme-by-programme review of technical cooperation activities undertaken in 2004.

(b) Report on UNCTAD's assistance to the Palestinian people

22. In line with the 2002–2005 United Nations medium-term plan, paragraph 167 of the Bangkok Plan of Action and paragraph 35 of the São Paulo Consensus, the UNCTAD secretariat continues to intensify its activities to assist the Palestinian people to develop capacities for effective policy making and management pertaining to international trade, development strategies, investment, public finance and related services. The secretariat has reported annually to the Trade and Development Board on its programme of technical assistance to the Palestinian people. The secretariat reports have also included updates on Palestinian economic and trade performance and the findings of related policy analysis and research by the secretariat.

23. According to the provisions of the biennial work programme, the secretariat has prepared its annual report on UNCTAD's assistance to the Palestinian people for consideration by the Board. In its first chapter, the report reviews recent economic developments in the occupied Palestinian territory and assesses the impact of the intensification of the crisis in the last five years and its effects on poverty, production capacity and economic performance. It also proposes some elements of a pro-poor development policy framework to help provide guidance in forming a viable economy for a viable state. The second chapter reviews UNCTAD technical assistance activities underway or completed since 2004, as well as resource requirements for technical cooperation proposals awaiting implementation.

24. In taking note of the Report on UNCTAD's assistance to the Palestinian people, the Board may wish to draw the General Assembly's attention to the deliberations under this item in its report on its fifty-second session, in accordance with General Assembly decision 47/445, as well as to the pending resource constraints affecting effective implementation of the São Paulo mandate in this regard.

The policy reviews are undertaken upon request by member States. The policy reviews are taken up at the intergovernmental level in order to promote the exchange of national experiences and, in particular, to familiarize Governments and investors with these countries' investment environment.

26. The Board will have before it the Investment Policy Review of Kenya. The secretariat and a high-level representative will introduce the country report, and this will be followed by deliberations of the review panel and a general discussion.
