II. President's summary

A. Activities undertaken by UNCTAD in support of Africa

(Agenda item 2)

12. This item of the Executive Session was discussed in two parts. The morning session focused on the presentation of the report contained in document TD/B/EX(55)/2, Activities undertaken by UNCTAD in support of Africa. The afternoon session was devoted to a panel debate on the New Partnership for Africa's Development, NEPAD. Background document TD/B/EX(55)/3, The New Partnership for Africa's Development: Performance, Challenges and the Role of UNCTAD, served as a basis for the discussion.

13. Under this item, the following participants addressed the Executive Session: Mr. Mothae Anthony Maruping, President of the Trade and Development Board; Mr. Taffere Tesfachew and Mr. Janvier Nkurunziza, Division for Africa, Least Developed Countries and Special Programmes; UNCTAD; and representatives of the following countries and groups of countries: Algeria, Angola, China, Ethiopia, the European Union, Indonesia, Kenya, Mauritius, Rwanda and Zimbabwe.

14. The secretariat presented a report on activities undertaken in support of Africa and used this first Executive Session following the conclusion of UNCTAD XIII as an opportunity to briefly share its views on the implementation of the work programme on Africa, as provided for in the Doha Mandate. The secretariat said that UNCTAD would put greater emphasis on prioritization, focus and pragmatic approaches in resource use. Greater interdivisional collaboration would be encouraged in view of the limited resources available in individual divisions. Moreover, there would be more dissemination of UNCTAD's work on Africa, and evaluation of its impact would be improved, within the limits imposed by available resources.

15. During the debate that followed, several delegates expressed appreciation for the quality of UNCTAD's assistance to Africa in all three pillars: research and policy analysis, consensus-building and technical cooperation. One delegate called on UNCTAD to continue engaging in ahead-of-the curve and creative thinking on Africa's development, especially as the world moved into designing a post-2015 development framework. Further, the forthcoming fiftieth anniversary of UNCTAD could be a good opportunity for UNCTAD to present a major publication that would propose integrated policy options to development policy in the post-2015 period. One delegate expressed satisfaction that a number of issues raised by delegates at last year's session had been addressed in this year's report.

16. One participant suggested that UNCTAD should organize informal workshops and brainstorming sessions with member States in order to contribute to the post-2015 development agenda. In the African context, such discussions could explore how interregional mechanisms such as the New Asia-Africa Strategic Partnership could contribute to the overall development of the continent in the context of South-South Cooperation. There was a call for a strengthening of partnerships between UNCTAD and regional economic commissions and regional development banks by their participation in each other's intergovernmental machinery and joint publications, when appropriate.

17. One delegation called upon the secretariat to continue improving its annual presentation of the report on activities undertaken in support of Africa by adding more evaluation and impact assessment. For example, future reports could be supplemented or replaced by an implementation matrix that would clearly indicate planned activities, requests for technical cooperation, implementation rates and assessments of actual impacts on beneficiaries and on broader objectives of sustainable and inclusive growth in Africa. Other relevant topics to be covered could include employment creation, the effects of global crises on economic growth in Africa, mechanisms for reducing vulnerability to external shocks, economic transformation and deeper integration of Africa into the global economy.

18. Some participants recommended that UNCTAD should enhance its engagement with the NEPAD Planning and Coordinating Agency on a variety of issues through avenues such as joint research work and the co-hosting of expert group meetings. New areas of cooperation between the two institutions should be explored.

19. Some representatives called upon the secretariat to support Africa in attracting foreign direct investment in non-extractive sectors. In this regard, it was encouraging that intra-African investments were rising, given that they were more targeted at non-extractive sectors such as manufacturing. Finding ways to increase such investments in the agriculture sector would contribute to making Africa self-sufficient in food production, reducing the devastating effects food crises had had on the region in the last few years. Others suggested that UNCTAD should support African countries in the area of international and bilateral investment negotiations and enhance its coordination with the African Platform for Development Effectiveness set up by the African Union and NEPAD in 2011.

20. Several delegates commended the Economic Development in Africa Report 2011 – Fostering Industrial Development in Africa in the New Global Environment for its quality and timeliness. It was important that UNCTAD support African countries in implementing industrial policies, including those suggested in the report, in order to promote industrial development in the region. Other areas where increased support from UNCTAD was sought included information and communications technologies development, private-sector development, nurturing of developmental States, food security, the process of accession to the World Trade Organization and more analytical work on regional economic integration.

21. A number of delegates appreciated the role played by UNCTAD in collaboration with the African Union in supporting the organization of an African Trade Ministers Meeting on the implementation of the African Union's Action Plan on Boosting Intra-African Trade during UNCTAD XIII in Doha, Qatar. They encouraged UNCTAD to continue working with the African Union and subregional institutions to implement the Plan.

22. Some delegates said that there should be much closer cooperation between UNCTAD, the Economic Commission for Africa and the African Union Commission in the implementation of Africa's development agenda. UNCTAD should continue providing its technical assistance and extend coverage to more countries. Programmes such as TrainForTrade, the Automated System for Customs Data, the Debt Management and Financial Analysis System, and Empretec had proven to be very useful to beneficiary countries.

23. The representative of the European Union indicated that his institution was prepared to actively support African countries in their efforts to improve governance; strengthen women's economic empowerment; facilitate the transition to a green economy; develop the private sector; promote domestic resource mobilization and the reform of tax systems; mobilize public and private funds, including remittances to finance infrastructure; build resilience to shocks; better manage natural resource rents and promote regional integration.

24. In order to further improve UNCTAD's work in Africa, several delegates said that there was a need for better coordination of technical assistance activities; further analytical work on issues related to tariff peaks, tariff escalation, value addition, economic diversification and commodity trade; and greater translation of UNCTAD's analytical work into projects that could have a direct impact at the grassroots level. Further, more consensus-building activities specifically targeting the key stakeholders in Africa on issues such as agricultural productivity, energy security, and transport infrastructure should be held.

25. One delegate regretted that there had been a decline in capacity-building activities offered by the Virtual Institute and said that efforts should be made to reverse that trend. Offering e-courses could not be a substitute for the traditional classroom training model, given that most African countries faced challenges related to digital connectivity.

B. Panel session – The New Partnership for Africa’s Development: Performance, Challenges and the Role of UNCTAD

26. Under this topic, the following participants addressed the meeting: Mr. Mothae Anthony Maruping, President of the Trade and Development Board; Mr. Taffere Tesfachew, Director, Division for Africa, Least Developed Countries and Special Programmes, UNCTAD; Mr. Ibrahim Mayaki, Chief Executive Officer, NEPAD Planning and Coordinating Agency; Ms. Justina Dugbazah, Gender Issues, NEPAD; Mr. Ousmane Djibo, Sustainable Land and Water Management, NEPAD; Mr. Emmanuel Nnadozie, Director, Economic Development and NEPAD Division, Economic Commission for Africa; Mr. Kamran Kousari, former Special Coordinator for Africa, Division for Africa, Least Developed Countries and Special Programmes, UNCTAD; and representatives of the following countries: Algeria, the Central African Republic, Ethiopia, Gabon, Nigeria, Rwanda, Tunisia, Uganda and Zimbabwe.

27. The keynote speaker recalled that when NEPAD had been launched 10 years ago, Africa was emerging from two decades of a development model revolving around structural adjustment and poverty reduction strategies. This period was characterized by an erosion of strategic thinking in Africa, and NEPAD was Africa’s response to that challenge. It brought about a vision of development that sought regional solutions to national problems, combining top-down with bottom-up approaches while rebalancing the roles of the State and the market. Although African countries realized that they faced many development challenges, they had identified agriculture and infrastructure development as their key priorities, treating gender equity and good governance as cross-cutting issues. NEPAD considered regional integration as crucial for delivery of its services; therefore, the key priorities must be regionalized and embedded in national plans. Among NEPAD’s innovations and successes was the introduction of a peer-review mechanism that had improved governance on the continent, as well as partnerships with civil society, the private sector and opposition parties in defining development strategies. The speaker acknowledged that many challenges remained. They included political instability and security issues; poor resource mobilization and management; failure to create enough jobs, especially for the youth; weak natural resource governance; and the continent’s failure to create a breed of African entrepreneurs capable of creating value within African economies using the continent’s vast natural resources.

28. In the discussion that followed, many delegates congratulated NEPAD for its achievements during its 10 years of existence. The outcome of an African initiative for Africa’s development, NEPAD was able to surmount a number of challenges in its early years to become a reference for development thinking in Africa. Several delegates highlighted some of its achievements: stronger ownership of policies and priorities by Africans; the African Peer Review Mechanism; renewed interest in infrastructure and agriculture development, as illustrated by the adoption of the continent-wide Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme, which had led to an increase in national budgets allocated to agriculture; integration of gender issues in strategic development thinking; better coordination of policies at the regional level; and mobilization of resources for the implementation of regional projects.

29. Some delegates noted that while NEPAD had been relatively successful in carrying out strategic thinking and planning, not enough progress had been made in project implementation, and further efforts should be deployed in the years ahead. They urged NEPAD, in collaboration with UNCTAD and other relevant actors, to take a more active part in promoting projects that addressed some of the most pressing challenges facing the African continent today. For example, NEPAD could help reverse Africa’s de-industrialization process; attract back African scientific and technical expertise that had migrated outside the continent; encourage a type of economic growth that created more jobs to reduce Africa's high level of poverty; improve the management of natural resource rents; ensure that Africa became the main beneficiary of its natural resources through, if necessary, renegotiation of investment contracts that disproportionately favoured investors at the expense of Africans; and strengthen domestic resource mobilization. NEPAD was also best placed to help African countries share best practices in project implementation and policy design.

C. Matters requiring action by the Board arising from or related to reports and activities of its subsidiary bodies

(Agenda item 3(a))

30. As the sixty-first session of the Working Party had been postponed until 23–25 July 2012, the report of the Working Party would be considered at the annual session of the Board in September.

31. At the third plenary meeting, one representative said that some documents mentioned in the draft provisional agenda of the sixty-second session of the Working Party were not yet available on the UNCTAD website. He urged the secretariat to issue the documents in a timely manner so as to allow groups to prepare for the meeting.

(Agenda item 3(b))

32. The President proposed that the Board request the extended Bureau to prepare and approve the topics and terms of reference of the expert meetings and to reach agreement on the agendas of the sessions of the Commissions scheduled to take place in November 2012. Once approved by the Bureau, the topics and terms of reference should be issued as a Board document.

33. In view of the differing opinions of some participants regarding the topics, the President at the third plenary meeting decided to convene a resumed session to discuss those issues.

34. At the fourth plenary meeting, two members of the Board requested that delegations meet informally to propose a date in the near future to finalize their selection of the second topic of the second round of single-year expert meetings.
