

Biographical Note

Bhumika Muchhala

Third World Network, Malaysia

Bhumika Muchhala works on finance and development issues for Third World Network (TWN), focusing on the international financial system, macro-policies and international financial institutions. She engages in a mix of advocacy, research and analysis, capacity-building, organizing and popular education in various fora, including the UN, international financial institutions such as the IMF, and global civil society, including women's rights and social justice movements. In New York, she follows several United Nations General Assembly processes, including intergovernmental negotiations, in the areas of post-Rio+20, Post-2015, finance and development, governance and social development.

Previously, she has coordinated the IMF Program at the Bank Information Centre in Washington, D.C., and the Asia Program of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, also in Washington, D.C. She has also engaged in the international labor rights movement, and taken lead roles in strategizing and organizing global social justice campaigns with civil society. She has a Masters in Development Economics from the London School of Economics, and was born in Bombay, India and raised in Jakarta, Indonesia.