Agenda

1. Introduction: Agency Effectiveness
2. Priority-setting and resource allocation
3. Specificities faced by young competition agencies
4. Conclusions
Introduction: Agency Effectiveness

- Goals/mission/purpose
- Legal tools at hand (investigation and enforcement powers, advocacy, research and promotion)
- Resources available (money and time)
- Activities and perception (selling & communication)
- Socio-economic environment where it operates
Priority-setting and resource allocation (I)

It’s all about tasks & resources organization

- Strategic planning (different factors to be weighted; nor too rigid neither too improvised, not some flexibility)

- Discretion may be limited in some jurisdictions: legal constraints/judicial review (‘must-do’ tasks, limited investigation & ex officio powers)

- Relevant implications (Legitimacy & reputation)
  - Internally (team building & staff motivation)
  - Externally (leadership for competition)
Priority-setting and resource allocation (&II)

Strategic planning: What we do & How we do it?

- Design of Work portfolio/project choice: Balance importance and impact of actions (strategic, legal & economic significance) with costs and risks

- Law indirectly drives prioritization: enforcement and cartel prosecution are main agency tasks and deliver highest pay-off (deterrence)
Specificities faced by young competition agencies

- Start-up process heavily constrains initial projects of agency:
  - Lack of competition awareness: market and competition culture building
  - Initial resources very limited

- Overcoming constraints as a retro-feeding process
Conclusions

- More room for informal prioritization
- Preference should be given to highest pay-off projects (enforcement): start with most obvious anti-competitive cases (industries prone to be cartelized; most clear cases of abuse of dominance)
- Don’t be paralyzed with planning and priority-setting!
