3. Further recommends that the proposed strategic framework for the period 2010–2011 be considered as a revision to the strategic framework for the current biennium (2008–2009) in order that the outcomes of the twelfth United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD XII), held in Accra in April 2008, can be implemented with minimum delay;

II. Proceedings

A. Chair's summary

Opening statements

1. At the opening plenary meeting of the session, on 16 June 2008, a number of delegations stressed the need for the effective implementation of the Accra Accord, and for the areas of work identified in the Accord to be duly reflected in the work programme. In particular, in light of the current food and energy crisis, there was a need to respect the spirit of paragraph 183 of the Accord when transforming the Commodities Branch into an autonomous unit. While all delegations recognized the importance of effectively addressing the problems faced by many developing countries in the field of commodities, different views were expressed on the actual implications of the paragraph in the context of the programmatic framework. Several delegations urged the Working Party, in considering the institutional arrangements in that respect, to be guided by the shared goal of ensuring that UNCTAD delivered substantively on its mandate on commodities and contributed more effectively to developing countries' efforts to formulate strategies and policies to respond to the challenges and opportunities of commodity markets.

2. With regard to the development of more meaningful performance indicators in the proposed United Nations strategic framework for the period 2010–2011, many delegations welcomed the revised indicators that reflected the consultations undertaken prior to the current session of the Working Party. It was recognized that the strategic framework could not contain a comprehensive list of specific indicators for each subprogramme. The objective therefore was to identify and utilize indicators that were precise, representative and measurable and that offered tangible outcomes to beneficiaries. Some delegations encouraged the adoption of additional performance indicators such as those presented by the Division on Investment and Enterprise, to enable all subprogrammes to track their work more effectively and to continuously improve their impact.

3. Some delegations asked what institutional changes would follow from the mandates agreed on in sub-theme 4 of the Accra Accord, and called for those changes to be set out in the strategic framework. In particular, the secretariat was urged to strengthen its results-oriented performance measurement and evaluation systems in order to enhance the effectiveness and relevance of UNCTAD.

4. For the sake of consistency in references to cross-cutting issues, some delegations proposed that subgroups of developing countries with special needs should be mentioned in the various subprogrammes. There were specific calls from regional coordinators for the special needs of the least developed countries to be mainstreamed in all subprogrammes, and for a stronger emphasis to be placed on the needs of landlocked developing countries in the strategic framework.
