Introduction to the UNCTAD Summer School 2019

The Crisis of Multilateralism: Is a Global Green New Deal the Solution

The Division of Globalization and Development Studies at UNCTAD and the Young Scholars Initiative are pleased to welcome you to the UNCTAD Summer School 2019. The activity will be held from 26 to 30 August in Geneva, Switzerland. The School will bring together academics, policy experts and young policymakers and scholars, to participate in an international debate on globalization and the management of its consequences for developing countries.

This year's Summer School will address the current state of multilateral system with its respective and collective effects on trade and development in developing countries. Each of the components of the agenda refers to one of the elements of the long-standing research agenda of UNCTAD throughout the last 5 decades. Topics cover a wide range of issues: the evolution of UNCTAD's role in the promotion of development friendly multilateral system, corporate rentierism, international trade, global value chains, digital economies and the goals and principles set by the Global Green New Deal and their implications in the areas of corporate and financial regulation, equality and social exclusion, climate change, and employment.

In this context, the programme of the School aims to provide participants with critical insights on current academic and policy debates on the topics of the school and their implications for the 2030 Agenda. These insights are meant to highlight the type of obstacles faced by developing countries in their pursue of sustainable development that are related to the structure of the multilateral system. Thus, the school aims to call attention on the importance of multilateral efforts to overcome these obstacles at a time when the international political and economic institutions established in the post-war period are under increasing strain.

These discussions will be joined by UNCTAD experts, academics, diplomats, and young scholars from many different countries. We expect to provide you with a lively and stimulating intellectual debate, with ideas and arguments that will be useful in your professional and academic life. Finally, we would like to thank you for attending the School and bring your ideas and expertise for these discussions.

Practical Information

- The official language of Geneva is French, but the city is a multilingual city and many people speak English fluently, especially in hotels.
- The local currency is the Swiss Franc (CHF), but numerous shops accept Euros (€). There's a variety of services to obtain cash at the airport and at the Palais des Nations (second floor). There are cashpoints (ATM) and numerous currency exchange places in the city.
- Upon arrival to Geneva: At immigration control at the airport, authorities may ask your reason for travel, even if you have a valid visa. It is recommended to carry all of your documents when entering the Schengen area: invitation letter, hotel booking, etc.
- Transportation in Geneva: The "Transport Public Genevois" (TPG, linked logo) is the transport operator (bus and tram) for Geneva. Plans and schedules are available on the TPG website, and at bus stops. A free ticket machine, valid for 80 minutes, is installed in the luggage collection hall, opposite the exit, on either side of the customs control. To reach the buses, go up to the Ground Floor, Check-in level. Exit the airport and turn left towards the train station entrance (CFF). Furthermore, if you are staying at a hotel or youth hostel, the establishment will offer you a Geneva Transportation Card which allows you to use public transport in Geneva free of charge during the period of your stay.
